

Terminal

The Terminal page provides access to a web-based Linux terminal on the flexAI system.

Log in using the same credentials as for the regular flexAI user login.

The terminal can be used for standard Linux commands that do not require elevated privileges, for example htop for monitoring system processes and resource usage.

Commands that require sudo or other administrative privileges are not available through the standard user account.

If you are not familiar with the Linux command line, it is best to use the Terminal only when instructed by customer support or another experienced user. Even without administrative privileges, some commands can affect running processes, files, or system behavior.
